Freeze a molded salad made with gelatin? Have it ready in your home freezer for a company meal?

You can, VPI nutritionists advise, if you use a recipe adapted to freezing. Because gelatin dishes tend to get watery after freezing and thawing, use about one-fourth less liquid than in the usual recipe.

Not only were salads made this way of good consistency when thawed, but diced celery in the tomato aspic and the molded chicken salad stayed crisp in tests at New Jersey Experiment Station. Celery had grown limp in previous frozen salad trials.

When using the commercially packaged lemon flavored gelatin for freezer salad, the nutritionists suggest 1½ cups of water instead of the 2 cups mentioned in the printed directions.

As for the molded chicken salad, the basic recipe tested was one that called for condensed cream soup and no other liquid except a little water for soaking the gelatin. Instead of chicken, you might use turkey, veal, ham, or tuna fish in this recipe.

Here's the basic recipe for the molded chicken salad to put in the freezer. 1 can condensed cream soup, such as cream of mushroom soup; 1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin (one envelope); 1-4 cup water; 2 cups diced meat; 1 cup diced celery; 2 pimientos cut in small pieces; 1-2 cup of cooked salad dressing (not mayonnaise). To make: Soak gelatin in cold water and add heated condensed soup. Stir to dissolve geltain, then add other ingredients. Mix, pour into a mold, and chill in the refrigerator until firm before freezing. Keep in the refrigerator no longer than two weeks. Thaw in the refrigerator overnight.

COSTLY MEAT

Only 10 More Shopping Days Before Christmas

Make them count for the most, by doing business in Appomattox, with your home-community friends. These ten days are going to slip by awfully fast. You won't have a minute to spare. Think what a big help to you and what a real savings in time it will mean to shop in Appomattox. Not that we won't have crowds of shoppers here too, just as in the big cities . . . but your parking is no problem, and friends gladly serve you. And while the Christmas shoping is being done, you can also visit our banks, appliance dealers, building material, timber and farm equipment and supply dealers, to attend to other necessary business. Appomattox is your best "one-stop-does-it-all" trading center. And bear in mind, that when you trade at home and keep all the business possible in your home community, you are helping to build that home community. That's why we say so often, "Appomattox is a Growing Town." And it is YOU making it grow . . . you and the dollars you earn and spend in Appomattox. Every local institution from the church to the school benefits from business done here. Through the past year, as in all the years before, we have sought dilligently to improve our services to you, so that together we might build a better community. Teamwork and cooperation are wonderful community goals.

On Monday December 16, the Red Cross Bloodmobile will be in Appomattox, at Liberty Baptist Church. A minimum of 70 pints are sought for this visitation. Donor Plege cards are now aavailable, with J. Newton Jennings chairman of the Recruitment Committee. We urge you to support this program . . . which supports Appomattox.
